Oppose Confirmation of Linda McMahon for Secretary of Education

Dear Senator,

On behalf of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, a coalition charged by its diverse membership of more than 240 national organizations to promote and protect the civil and human rights of all persons in the United States, and the 99 undersigned organizations, we urge you to oppose the confirmation of Linda McMahon to be the next U.S. Secretary of Education. All parents and students in this country — a majority of whom are people of color or are low-income¹ — want the best education, support, and dignity for their own children. We are with them and cannot support a nominee who has demonstrated that she seeks to undermine bedrock American principles of equal opportunity, nondiscrimination, and public education itself.

The Secretary of Education's role as an enforcer of education and civil rights laws² is central to advancing our shared vision of an inclusive and diverse system of high-quality public education that enables every student to live up to their potential. McMahon has demonstrated no previous commitment to ensuring equal educational opportunity in schools. There are even shocking and credible allegations in an ongoing lawsuit that she enabled and concealed more than a decade of child sexual abuse that she was obligated to prevent and address.³ And most recently, in her hearing before the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee on February 13, 2025, she failed to demonstrate that she is capable of and committed to protecting students and enforcing the law, including when directed by President Trump or unelected Elon Musk to do otherwise.

While Linda McMahon did rightfully emphasize the obligation of the secretary to comply with and enforce the law during her hearing, she had no meaningful response to what she would do when asked or directed to violate the law by President Trump or unelected Musk.

Even having been told by senators that federal law prohibits interference in curriculum,⁴ McMahon was unable or unwilling to unequivocally acknowledge that courses about Black history are lawful (regardless of any executive action) and vital to a thorough education. When asked about whether sex-based harassment must be both severe and pervasive before a school should be required to intervene, McMahon rightly recognized the importance of addressing harassment that is either severe or pervasive — seemingly unaware that the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) is currently enforcing, and the organization she chairs has explicitly supported,⁵ a harmful Title IX rule that uses the more stringent “and” standard.⁶ McMahon’s clear lack of knowledge and understanding about the requirements of the role — whether her inability to name any of the federal guardrails in the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA), her inability to describe the purpose of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), or her lack of response to the underfunding of OCR (and resultant backlog of complaints) — only underscore how unqualified she is for such an important position.

McMahon’s defense that she hopes to learn on the job what is required of a Secretary of Education would be a disqualifying answer in any environment. In this moment, when the threats to education are so overwhelming, and when so much damage has already been done in the first few weeks of this new administration, McMahon’s response is even more alarming.

At no point in the history of the U.S. Department of Education has the question of leadership been more important. President Trump and unelected Musk have worked since January 20 to eviscerate equal opportunity in education. Not only do they seek to destroy the Department of Education by terminating the people who do the work,⁷ gutting the grants that Congress has authorized to ensure research is available for educators,⁸ weaponizing funding⁹ and the Office for Civil Rights¹⁰ in order to advance their agenda of bias and discrimination, and threatening the private data of student loan holders,¹¹ Trump has also issued executive orders that take direct aim at the safety and wellbeing of children who are LGBTQI¹² and/or immigrants;¹³ that seek to scare educators away from teaching students the truth and honestly preparing them for the future;¹⁴ and that seek to turn back the clock on diversity, equity, and inclusion.¹⁵ President Trump and unelected Elon Musk have brought their cronies into the department and granted them access to private data about students, families, and schools in furtherance of their lawless and reckless agenda. While the immediate targets of this disaster machine may be vulnerable children and families, civil servants, and seasoned researchers, left unchecked by Congress and the courts, this plan would lead to shuttered classrooms, squandered potential, and a diminished future for our nation.

¹⁰ The Office for Civil Rights dismissed 11 complaints related to the hostile learning environment caused by book banning that disproportionately targeted LGBTQ authors and topics as well as authors of color or topics related to race and racism without investigating whether the schools created hostile learning environments (see: <https://www.ed.gov/about/news/press-release/us-department-of-education-ends-bidens-book-ban-hoax>), while also opening directed investigations into Denver Public Schools’ provision of a gender inclusive restroom (see: <https://www.chalkbeat.org/colorado/2025/01/28/trump-education-department-investigating-denver-for-all-gender-restroom/>), and campus protests with which the administration disagrees (see: <https://www.ed.gov/about/news/press-release/us-department-of-education-probes-cases-of-antisemitism-five-universities>). In utilizing the precious tools of the Office for Civil Rights to advance a narrow political agenda, instead of faithfully applying the law to the facts to root out discrimination, the Department of Education is currently weaponizing the work of this vital office.

The U.S. Department of Education is responsible for implementing and enforcing civil rights laws protecting students from discrimination on the basis of race, color, national origin (including immigration status, first language, and shared ancestry), sex (including sexual orientation and gender identity), and disability and laws providing for educational opportunity from early childhood through graduate school. The person responsible for leading that department must absolutely be committed to enforcing federal laws on behalf of every single student in this country — without regard to immigration status, disability, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender identity, family income, home language, or religion. Our nation’s Constitution, economy, future, and children deserve no less. For their sake, you must reject Linda McMahon’s confirmation to serve as Secretary of Education.

Sincerely,
The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights
